Justification

In Mexico, ischemic heart diseases represent the first cause of mortality, with a high percentage attributable to acute myocardial infarction. The seriousness of the problem requires facing this challenge directly, through actions aimed to provide effective access to health services to slow down the upward trend in mortality from these diseases, being one of these actions, training the health personnel.

The seminar seeks to introduce students to the knowledge of heart diseases, including congenital heart disease; as well as addressing the importance of its diagnosis and timely management.
