Justification

Education was considered from the Hippocratic Oath as one of the responsibilities and virtues of medical practice, the social and technological complexities of today can facilitate but also disorient the goals of medical education, which is why we look for our students to have a clear focus of the objectives that must be achieved when teaching, how to be more effective in transmitting knowledge and doing it in a didactic, simple and clear way. The points that are reviewed seek to establish the minimum elements necessary to promote and carry out medical education at present and how to avoid losing focus and respect necessary qualities such as professionalism and ethics.
